

15 Acre Homestead is moving and changing everything in 2020!

Hello Again!

Everything has changed for us!

Just like that, everything has changed for our homestead. Due to some family issues, Lance and I are deciding if we need to move to the state of Pennsylvania to be closer to my children, or stay in Florida.

This is a huge decision as we are very established, happy and comfortable in our current homestead. However, if you're a parent, you know that no matter what you want, sometimes you have to sacrifice and change for the well-being of your children. That's where we are currently.

We have not made a final decision, but with the Corona Virus pandemonium that's happening in the world, we are definitely leaning towards being closer to family. We are also really concentrating on self-sufficiency more than ever.

By my next newsletter, we will have made a decision as to the best direction for us and our family and I will know what steps and actions come next. In the meantime, let's catch you up on what else is happening, shall we?

On The Website

There are some great posts for you to read about our new way of gardening. I wrote a pretty extensive article on What You Can Add to the Compost Pile. It gives you a pretty good list as a reference.

Have you considered starting a food forest on your property? It's probably easier than you imagined actually. My post, How To Establish a Fantastic Edible Food Forest Easily, will teach you about what it is and how to get it started.

Once you have made the decision to start a food forest you will want to read about the plants that can be added and you can do that in my post, The Most Popular Options for Food Forest Perennials. After reading that you may want to check out my Guide to Food Forest Plants in my shop.

I also started vermicomposting recently and you can do so to after reading How To Get Started with Vermicomposting. It is super easy to start and maintain and you won't believe how good it is for your gardens! And when you are ready you can read, How To Harvest Your Vermicompost Bin to learn how to successfully collect all those castings.

March Happenings...
